The Israeli Cabinet met today for three hours under the guise of a classified defense committee, thereby closing off comment on the deliberations. But the issue of bringing Mr. Dayan or Mr. Weizman back to Israel for an assessment of the situation is known to have come up.

Mr. Carter has ordered planners to set up new procedures for enforc-ing the guidelines, including day-by-day montoring by the wage-price council, formal involvement by inflation-lighters in drafting oew regulations, and an expanded White House agency for meting out government sanctions.

• The wage guidelines are expected to have some room for exceptions, to avoid hamstringing workers unfairly. Mr. Carter yesterday approved a "low-wage exemp-tion" that will avoid restrictions on pay increases for workers earning less than $3 to $4 an hour. And, the administration has agreed not to apply the new guidelines to con-tracts that are in existence when the program is announced Tuesday.

Bitter and highly emotional at a press conference at his home here, Mr. Nkomo vowed to avenge fully the death of more than 200 "noncombatant refugees" killed in an attack by Rhodesian fighter jets yesterday in one of his camps outside the Zamhian

He said that his Zimbahwe African Peoples Unioo (ZAPU) would not be swayed by such raids into attending talks with Prime Minister Ian Smith or the Western-proposed conference, which he called "allparty nonsense.

"If Smith thinks that way, or his helpers, or the United States and Britain think this is what they can do to us, then they must be daydreaming," he said referring also to the three black members of the ruling Executive Council in Rhodesia — Bishop Abel Muzorewa, Rev. Ndahaniogi Sithole and Chief Jeremiah Chirau. But when asked specifically if we would attend a conference if Mr. Smith and his black colleagues

Route Opened for Needed Fertilizer

Zambia Bungle Ended Rhodesia Curb

By David B. Ottaway

LUSAKA, Zambia (WP) --Zambia's bid to impose an economic blockade on the white minority government of neighboring Rhode sia bas ironically ended in its own economie strangulation and surrender to the hard realities of a landlocked central African country.

Its decision earlier this month to reppen its southern route to the sea through Rhodesia and South Africa after nearly six years was taken as it became clear that the country stood to reap a disastrously small harvest next spring if at least 90,000 tons of a total 170,000 tons of essential fertilizers did oot reach Zambian farmers before the rains begin oext month.

The decision was taken in the midst of growing Zambian discontent over the never-ending half-empty shelves in food stores throughout Zambia and just two months before a general and presi-dential election in which an embarrassingly small turnout of voters is expected to re-elect President Kenneth Kaunda for another five-year

End of Tether

Simply put, Zambia reached the end of its economic and political tether before Rhodesia did. While the Rhodesians learned to turn the adversity of United Nations sancoons into a powerful stimulus for development, the Zambians failed to do as much in the face of a similar economic trial.

Instead, Zambia has succumbed to a combination of fallen copper prices, gross economic mismanage-ment and an acute lack of outlets to the sea. Even the great Chinese-built, 1000-mile Uhuru (freedom) railoard linking it to the Tanzanian port of Dar es Salaam could not save this country from slow economic asphyxiation.

However, it now appears the Zambian decision to reopen its southern route has come too late to get the fertilizer here in time, raising the likelihood of a serious shortage of the key staple crop of corn next year.

The decision has greatly angered both Rhodesia's nationalist guerril-las, oow aiming more than ever to cut the country's communication lines, and Zambia's two most important front-line allies, Tanzania and Mozambique. More important, it is serving to deepen the already evident rift among the five front-line states involved in the Rhodesia dispute - they include Angola and Botswana - and to isolate Zambia

Leadership Rift

Uoderlying the economic crisis that has forced Zambia into using once again its southern route has been a long-standing political rival-ry between President Kaunda and Tanzanian President Julius Nyerere for leadership of the five front-line

Tanzanian-Zambian line.
The fertilizer crisis befalling Zambia has been in the making since early last spring when the Zambian government first began negotiations with Mozambique for shipment of 235,000 tons of various vital commodities through their port, rail and road oetwork. The possible use of Dar es Salaam was apparently excluded from the beginning because of the backlog of Zambia-bound cargo. More than 60,000 of the 170,000 tons of fertilizer was bought in the United States under a $30 million commodity import loan signed at the end of March; the rest came from Japan and European coun-tries under similar arrangements.

Arrangements Delayed

Right from the beginning, Zam-bia was months behind in making iis purchases and arrangements for getting the fertilizer into the country on time. Normally, it should have been here six months before the rains set in, according to West-ern economists here.

Mozambican authorities say the Zambians first approached them in March on using their ports as an alternative to Dar es Salaam. The idea, they say, was to bring 32,000 tons a month by rail and road from the port of Beira into Zambia, 7.000 tons of it via Malawi.

But by mid-April, the Zambians reportedly realized this would never work because of their own in-ability to truck more than 10,000 tons a month from the Mozambican railhead of Moatize.

can railhead of Moatze.

Meanwhile, shipload after shipload of fertilizer was arriving in Beira with oo possibility of moving it fast enough to Zambia. At the beginning of August, the Mozambicans finally began refusing to accept any more, with 90,000 tons about to arrive in Beira. But later they agreed to take it in Monato. they agreed to take it in Maputo, the country's capital.

The fertilizer was to go by rail at the rate of 1,000 tons a day from Mapato through South Africa to the little town of Francistown in Botswana and from there by truck northward into Zambia.

But after making these complicated arrangements, the Zambians discovered that Francistown could handle only 200 tons a day and that there was no way to get even that amount across the Zambezi River on the one working ferry at Kazan-gula on the Zambian-Botswanan border.

August Bombing

Apparently well-informed about the gathering fertilizer crisis, the Rhodesians at the end of August Rhodesians at the end of August bombed the road leading from Moatize in northern Mozambique into Zambia, killing two Zambian drivers and halting all traffic for three days. They also triggered shooting around Kazangula that closed the ferry there repeatedly, according to the Mozambican account of what happened.

Then, as if acting in cooperation with the Rhodesians, or possibly the Zambians already, the South Africans approached the Mozambi-cans on Sept. 3 about whether they would allow the fertilizer in Maputo to be shipped directly by rail-road through Rhodesia to the Zambian town of Livingstone. The Mozambicans refused, as this would have involved them in secret sanctions-busting.

Thus, as of early September, it seems Zambia was aware it was never going to get its fertilizer on time, but it would take another five weeks before the government finally took the decision to reopen its

95,900 Tons Waiting

Now with only a few weeks, if that, before the rains begin, there are 50,000 tons of fertilizer piled up in Beira and 45,000 tons in Mapu-to. Only the 32,000 tons rerouted from the Mozambican capital to East London in South Africa seems likely to reach Zambia in time along its reopened southern route.

timate that altogether about 30 to 40 per cent of the total fertilizer needed before the rains begin will be available to farmers, meaning that next year's corn crop probably will not cover the country's needs The fertilizer saga illustrates the kind of failing day-to-day crisis management that Zambian authorities are engaged in as they seek with increasing desperation to avoid total economic paralysis. Perhaps the main immediate benefit of reopening the southern route will be political ones if at least some basic commodities can be gotten back on store shelves. President Kenneth Kaunda, is still supporting the Western initiative. After yesterday's attack on the outskirts of his capital, he may be more anxious than ever to see an all-party conference held.

So far, he has made no statement about the raid or what Zambia will do in retaliation.

Mr. Mugabe, who leads the Mozambique-based Zimbabwe African National Union (ZANU) said earlier this month that his party would not accept any further U.S. participation in the negotiations for a settlement of the Rhodesian dispute because Washington had al-lewed Mr. Smith to visit the United States and was oo looger "impar-

Whether he will agree to attend a conference sponsored partly by the United States in the wake of his sharp criticism of the U.S. role remains to be seen.

But Mr. Mugabe has never excluded attending an all-party con-ference and indicated publicly that ZANU disagreed with Mr. Nkomo's comment that it was "dead and buried."

The two Patriotic Froot leaders will have to get together to discuss a common position in the light of Mr. Smith's acceptance. But if both Mr. Kaunda and Mr. Mugabe's two key backers among the frootline presidents, Samora Machel of Mozambique and Julius Nyerere of Tanzania, want the two nationalist leaders to go to the conference, it is likely that they will agree at least to

Thus the issue of whether a conference will be held probably de-pends heavily on the position taken by the five front-line states and the ability of the United States and Britain to convince them that it has some chance of succeeding.

Mr. Nkomo took issue with the description of the attacked camp at Chikumbi, located 12 miles from here, as a "main controlling military headquarters" of his guerrilla army. Boumedienne Being Treated in Moscow

By Jim Hoagland

PARIS, Oct. 20 (WP) — Houari Bournedienne, Algeria's ascetic and militant president, is seriously ill and has flown to the Soviet Union for treatment in a convalescent hos-

The Algerian leader's prolonged illness is delaying several key domestic and international initiatives. including new attempts by Western countries and moderate Arab states to arrange a settlement in a guerrilla war in the Western Sahara terri-tory that has brought intermittent armed clashes between the Algerian and Moroccan armies since Janu-

The United States, which is Morocco's main source of military supplies, has sought to maintain a neutral stance between Morocco and Algeria in the conflict, Washington has refused to recognize Morocco's sovereignty over the Sahara and has held up a large arms package requested by Morocco for more than a year because of the strong likelihood that Morocco would use those arms in the Sahara. Western efforts for a settlement are reportedly being intensified as previously known as the Spanish Sahara. Polisario, which also has Soviet backing, is fighting for an independent Sahara republic.

Daily to Be 'Entertaining, Street-Wise'

By Jonarhan Friendly

NEW YORK, Oct. 20 (NYT) -Rupert Murdoch, the owner of the New York Post, announced yesterday that he would start a new 10cent morning tabloid newspaper here to be called the Daily Sun. A spokesman for the Australian pubisher said publication would begin within the oext several days," possibly as soon as Tuesday.

The paper, which will have an in-itial pressrun of 500,000 to 750,000 copies, will feature "bright, enter-taining, street-wise" news and late sports scores, the spokeman said. "It will be what the Daily News was 15 years ago," he added.

Mr. Murdoch already publishes the London Sun and it had long been known that he intended to start a similar newspaper here. The London Sun emphasizes short news articles, especially on crime, and is best known for its daily picture oo page 3 of a woman naked from the waist up.

The announcement came while negntiators for New York's two other general interest dailies, The New York Times and the Daily News, were negotiating with the pressmen's union in an effort to end the strike that has kept them shut for the last 10 weeks. The Post, which was also struck Aug. 10, rewhich was also struck Aug. 10, re-sumed publication two weeks ago after concluding a "me-too" agree-ment guaranteeing to match what-ever the pressmen finally got from the News and The Times.

The head of the pressmen's union, William Kennedy, interrupted the bargaining session this afternoon to go to the Post and discuss with Mr. Murdoch what effect the new paper will have on pressmen's jobs there. Mr. Kennedy has been under mounting pressure from other unions to reach a settlement that will return their 8,500 men to work, but Mr. Murdoch's an nouncement yesterday may mean they will relax that pressure until Mr. Kennedy can finish dealing with Mr. Murdoch.

which has been most threatened by Mr. Murdoch's expansion into the morning tabloid field, said the News was starting a oumber of new features as soon as it could resume prioting and added: "We welcome the readers' decision as to which paper they will buy." There was no immediate comment from The Management officials at both pa

Congressional Frenzy

Although the 95th Congress bas decamped, squads of weary staff assistants and clerks are still processing the heaps of legislation that the Senate and House disposed of, one way or another, in those marathon sessions last week. It will be days hefore every bill that has passed has been printed and transmitted to the president. It could he months before ordinary citizens find out some of the things this Congress did. Right now, few legislators themselves have had a chance to learn all the details of the tax bill. the energy package and the hundred-plus other bills they approve in the last frenzied

There are obvious hazards in making laws at such a pitch. It enhances the power of those who control major hills - or can obstruct them. Senate Finance Committee chairman Russell Long, D-La., wound up as usual in the cathird seat. The frenzy also invited all kinds of wheeling and dealing, from the nonstop hargaining that enabled Rep. Phillip Burton, D-Cal., to wrap up a $1-hillion package of park projects, to the attempted parlay on behalf of sugar, steel, copper and textiles interests.

With most normal procedural safeguards cast aside, lawmakers must rely even more than normally on the staffs' diligence and their colleagues' good faith. It's a dicey way to operate, and quite accident-prone. One measure passed at 4 a.m. Sunday, for instance, has thrown foreign-service retirement rules into a snarl that will have to he untangled hy the next Congress or the courts. Other costly problems are hound to turn up. End-of-session jams test both the stamina of human beings under pressure and the whole system's capacity to absorb and correct mis-

Yet the same factors that make such frenzies perilous also make them practically unavoidable. Legislating by tradeoffs, for instance, promotes delay as everyone tries to hold hack cards to play at the hest time. And there were special reasons why so much major legislation piled up this year. The Democratic congressional leadership and various interest groups started out with large agendas of domestic measures - jobs, urban aid, consumer hills, lahor-law reform - that the Republican administrations of the last decade had not been hospitable to. President Carter then added on most of the programs he had promised to advance in four years - and asked Congress to deal with intricate, divisive energy issues hesides.

It's worth recalling, too, how much time and energy this Congress devoted to institutional concerns, from the successful struggles for new ethics codes to the less praiseworthy attempts to dictate foreign policy and hring various agencies to heel. Moreover, the surge of "democracy" on Capitol Hill has made the House, especially, fractious enough to make a mule skinner wince. Finally, the political climate shifted during this session as inflation accelerated and curhing government became a paramount concern.

What's surprising about all this is not the Congress got so jammed up hut that the results were as good as they were. Congress did support President Carter on the crucial questions of foreign policy - and did, in the end, curh its own extravagant instincts on the water-projects and highway hills. Civil-service reform was a triumph for Congress as well as a presidential victory. The energy package is at least a start. The tuition tax credit plans got shelved. The House accepted rules on Medicaid funding of abortions fairer than the curhs imposed last year.

Perhaps most heartening is the possibility that this year's congressional convulsions may not recur. A few tough subjects, such as urhan aid and health-care costs, have been held over, hut the 96th Congress's agenda is likely to he lighter overall. Moreover, proposals in the House to consolidate subcommittees and improve the flow of legislative traffic are gathering momentum. The popular focus on trimming government reinforces that tendency. All told, the 96th Congress may be somewhat less frenetic than the one that just left town.

Trudeau in Trouble

Canada's special elections this week have done serious damage to Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau, as he faces national elections next spring. Canadian politics will now proceed on two levels. While his Liberal Party prepares itself in the conventional way for the elections, there will be a good deal of pulling and hauling internally over his leadership. Mr. Trudeau has grimly declared he intends to remain at the head of the party. But that may not necessarily be the last

The special elections were for 15 parliamentary seats, seven held hy Liberals. Of the 15, the Liberals won two. Ontario, with a third of Canada's population, is its political center of gravity, and five of the previously Liberal seats were there. The Liberals lost all of them and, worse, got fewer votes than either of the two principal opposition parties.

The Liberal's opposition is split between one party to their right and another to their left. A good many Liherals suspect that the defeats this week were owed to votes specifically against Mr. Trudeau. It would follow that, if he retired, the party might hope to win once again because of its strong centrist position. But Mr. Trudeau is not the retiring

He is now in his 11th year as prime minister. He has been in power longer than the head of any other government among the world's major democracies. A man of brilliance and style, he has devoted himself above all to the cause of national unity. He came to office as the man who, more than any other, might be able to hold the Frenchspeaking and English-speaking populations together. A decade later, the separatist movement now seems in fact to be losing momentum. The separatists who control the Quebec provincial government get more and more vague about the promised referendum on Quebec's independence, and more and more defensive about Quebec's disproportionately severe economic troubles. Stagflation is simultaneously undermining both Mr. Trudeau's position and that of his separatist

The inflation rate in Canada is a little lower than in the United States. But unemployment, at 8.5 percent last month, is much higher. The Canadian dollar has been sinking on the international currency exchanges even faster than its U.S. cousin. There seems to be a current of thinking in the English-speaking provinces that Quehec separatism, Mr. Trudeau's special preoccupation, is a diminishing threal - while the state of the economy is a rising one. New circumstances sometimes require new politicians. The special elections have forced Canada to consider

Equal Rights at Sea

U.S. District Court Judge John J. Sirica has opened up a can of worms with his ruling that Congress may not forhid Navy women from serving aboard ships at sea except for transports and hospital ships. Navy women had sued on the grounds that Congress would not let them serve at sea. The judge said this constituted a denial of women's equal rights.

Now we come to the problem. Suppose Navy men were to hring a class action suit that argues their sex was being denied equal rights. Suppose male sailors were to contend that being required to serve at sea - especially in time of war or in some equivalent dangerous situation - constituted a denial of their equal rights. Why should men sailors he forced to risk their lives in the service. while women are not?

Make no mistake about it, if women volunteers were "required" to serve long tours of duty at sea, would they enlist in the same proportions as men? If women could be assigned hy the Navy to hazardous duty, would they sign up in the same numbers?

Take away this female advantage and require them to serve in war areas, and wouldn't recruitment of women be likely to

Kurisu that the Japanese defense forces might have to resort to "extralegal" action in the event of a surprise attack is still smouldering.

The chairman of the joint chiefs of staff of the Japanese Self-Defense Forces, who resigned in the wake of the criticism aroused by his statement, was referring to the fact that under Japanese defense laws. the JSDF cannot go into action without the specific authorization of the premier and the approval of the Diet. He was saying, in effect, that if Japan was taken by surprise by an armed attack on its territory, it might be necessary for the JSDF to go into action without waiting for the premier's prior permission, rather than stand hy idly until it was perhaps too late.

To some, the general was merely stating the obvious, but in a country wrapped up in an almost fanancal aversion to the use of force under any circumstances, his remarks played right into the hands of the political opposition. In heated Diet debate, Premier Fukuda stressed be had no intention of allowing the military to usurp control over the defense forces from the civilian response would not he circum-establishment. The government's scribed by the restrictions of Japalatest white paper on defense also makes a point of emphasizing that Japan's defense capability "is always placed under civilian

Not Comfortable

Ever since Gen. MacArthur ordered Japan to set up a para-mili-tary police reserve, which grew into today's JSDF, the Japanese have never been totally comfortable with the military presence.

Deeply seared by the national destruction into which their military rulers led them in World War II, Japanese welcomed Article 9 of their postwar Constitution categorically renouncing war and the pos-session of arms forever. Later, the inconsistency of the JSDFs existence with the constitutional ban on arms was justified with the explanation - upheld by the Supreme Court - that Article 9 did not deny Japan the right to defend Nevertheless, Japan has kept its defense spending to a minimum, which it has been able to do under the protective umbrella of its security treaty with the United States. In the event of a major attack, the United States would come to

However, few Japanese, the spe-cialists excepted, have ever given much thought to what the JSDF would acutally do in a crisis. Though the majority of Japanese, according to recent polls, no longer disapprove of the defense forces, the possibility that they might one day be called into action has seemed too remote to be worth thinking about seriously. Most Japanese seem to consider the JSDF's primary role to be disaster relief.

Face the Fact

What Gen. Kurisu did was to belp force Japanese to face the faci that their army navy and air force are more than cosmenc appurtenances to their nationhood.

Actually, a study has been in progress since last year on "legal questions related to the effective and smooth implementation by the defense forces of their responsibility should they be ordered into defensive action under Article 76 of the Defense Forces Law", to quote

This is the article allowing the premier to order the JSDF into action - against armed aggression against Japanese territory proper - from that old Watergate school, it-

A defense official explained: "Until recently, it was thought that existing laws spelling out the su-premacy of civilian control over the defense forces was sufficient, but now there is an awareness that perhaps we haven't covered all the points necessary to maintain an adequate defense posture after [note the after] the JSDF is ordered into action, such as calling up reserves, procuring materiel, and so on."

Opposition

Gen. Kurisu's reference to "extralegal action" was to that possible time span before the pemier's order. If Japan is attacked before the premier can make a decision, why not let the JSDF counterattack before it is too late and obtain the premier's approval afterwards? There is considerable opposition to this line of reasoning. Clearly, the Japanese are confronted with a dilemma. But at least there is now a cognizance that the dilemma exists. A related aspect that has so far not been publicly raised is that U.S. forces in Japan operate under their own chain of command. In the event of an attack on Japan, their response would not he circumnese defeuse laws.

Emergency

In an actual emergency, there would obviously be close coordinanon between the two countries, but in theory, U.S. forces — principally the Air Force — could be repelling surprise assult on Japanese territory while the JSDF stood by waiting for the premier to act.

Such U.S. action would not come

Legislative Sleeper Aimed at Scandals

By Anthony Lewis

BOSTON — When a president them look grave by the dramatic or his friends are suspected of step of appointing a special prowrongdoing who investigates and enforces the law against them? The bill that passed Congress Again and again in our history, we have argued that U.S. version of the ancient political question: Who guards the guardians? Each time an ad hoc answer has emerged from the political mix of Congress, the executive and public opinion. But the next time there is a Teapol Dome or Watergate or Bert Lance affair, if there is a next time, the question may answer itself. That surprising possibility arises from a bill that Congress passed in the final hours of the session last weekend. Hardly anyone noticed in the rush, but it is legislation with a claim to attention.

The bill establishes a permanent mechanism to deal with charges that high government officials have violated the law. Whenever those charges have weight, a special presentor will be appointed. The awkward and inevitably political decision over whether to appoint one But the next time there is a sion over whether to appoint one will be taken out of the hands of future presidents and Congresses.

Insulate

Watergate gave currency to the idea of the special prosecutor. The integrity and performance of Archibald Cox and his successors made it seem the ideal device to insulate law enforcement from politics. But applying the model to long-term reforms turned out to be less simple than it seemed.

One proposal was to have a permanent special prosecutor's office, with a substantial staff, that would take over from the Justice Department any case believed to involve official wrongdoing. But critics doubted that outstanding lawyers would be attracted to a job with such indefinite duties. They argued, moreover, that such a permanent office would trivialize the idea that a special prosecutor should be an exceptional device, reserved for serious occasions.

A full-time office of special prosecutor might also weaken the nec-essary responsibility of the attorney general for law enforcement. That was generally the view of both Democrats and Republicans who had beld the job recently, and their opposition was telling.

But there are also dangers of leaving the problem unsettled, with no regular mechanism established. Then every time someone charges a high official with something, there are political demands for a special prosecutor — as in the Lance case. If the executive hranch says no, it may be playing politics; or even if its reasons are good, it may not be believed. And charges may turn out to be frivolous. It would be unfair broad social change hut at before investigating them to make of the government structure.

was drafted to meet those objec-nons. Its principal sponsor was Sen Abraham Ribicoff, D-Conn.

Sen. Abraham Ribicoff, D-Conn., and it had President Carter's support. It passed as part of a package of ethics legislation.

The mechanism set up will begin operating whenever the Justice Department is given specific charges of federal crimes by a president, vice president, high federal official or party officer. The department or party officer. The department will then have 90 days to investigate. Then the case will go automatically to a special division of the U.S. Court of Appeals in Wash-if the department finds that the charges are frivolous or unsubstantiated, the attorney general will so advise the court in a memorandum. That will end the matter — except that the attorney general will continue to bear the political responsibility for his conduct of the investi-

If after the 90 days the attorney general tells the court that there is general tells the court that there is reason to prosecute or investigate further, or if he fails to say anything, then the bill requires the court to appoint a temporary special prosecutor for that case. The only exception to the rule would be if the attorney general found that the Justice Department could hanthe Justice Department could han-dle the case itself because there was no conflict of interest — and if the court agreed with that conclusion.

Criticism

The involvement of a court in the process will donbtless meet some criticism. When President Richard Nixon fired Cox, a proposal for a judicially appointed replacement drew objections on that ground and was blocked in the Senate Judiciary Committee. But an often forgotten provision of the Constitution specifically allows the Congress to vest the appointment of officials in the federal courts, and the judges now do fill temporary vacancies among the regular federal prosecutors.

One other provision of the bill is worth noting. It would create an office of senate legal counsel - for the Senate alone, because the House objected. This will be the first time either body of Congress has a full-time legal staff to represent it in the courts, intervene in cases and so on. The step is a symptom of the fact that more and more issues are now being litigated and that the Senate wants to be heard on them. None of this sounds, or is, revolutionary. But the bill is an indication of what I think is a trend: Toward legislation that aims not at broad social change but at reform

U.S. Data Show Lung Cancer Up Among Women

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20 (AP)— Lung cancer, by far the deadliest of the three most common cancers, has increased dramatically among U.S. women in this decade, according to a statistical report published

The National Cancer Institute, said its new figures, when com-pared with the last major survey, conducted for 1969-1971, indicate that cancer cases overall have been increasing 1 to 2 percent a year since 1970, but that the lung cancer rate among white women has risen 8 percent a year and among black women oearly 10 percent. There have also been substantial increases in cancer of the uterus, but that is not considered as deadly a disease.

Previously noted declines in the rate of cervical cancer in women and stomach cancers among men and women appear to be continu-ing, the figures indicate.

Colon and rectal cancers, breast cancer and lung cancer are by far the most common, occurring nearly twice as often as any other form of the disease. The report indicates that only 12 percent of lung-cancer victims survive as long as three years, while nearly four out of five women with breast cancer are still alive three years later, and about half of those with cancer of the colon live at least three years.

French Communist Party Withdrawing to 'Ghetto'

By FLora Lewis

PARIS, Oct. 20 (NYT) - With its leadership and its policies under mounting attack by disillusioned members of various views, the French Communist Party is with-Italian comrades for opening the way to the Red Brigades by moving too much toward the center. drawing into isolation.

The debate has been simmering in the party since the defeat of the left in French legislative elections Mr. Konopnicki's words were scathing, both on the internal and in March, a defeat which their Socialist allies and some Communists blame on a waffling party line and a wrong-headed leadership.

The internal quarreling, only oc-asionally audible under the cover of party discipline, continues. The struggle could change before a new position is fixed at next year's party congress. But the way things are going, there is likelihood of a return to what French commentators call "the ghetto," deliberate detachment from the main currents of po

That would break the movement of Eurocommunism, already divided since the breach of the alliance between French Communists and Socialists in September of last year. The Enrocommunist parties— French, Italian, Spanish—never did reach agreement on many basic points. But for a period of two years, their policies were converging and appeared to be leading them toward joint positions on electoral success and independence

Parties Diverge

Now they are preoccupied with internal problems and once again diverging. Moscow has made an in-verted note of the receding Eurocommunist tide, with a commenta-ry congratulating the Western Communist parties on their evolving attitudes.

The latest open attack on its stand from within the French party came from Guy Konopnicki, a member of the executive committees of the Communist Youth Movement and an editor of the party's intellectual weekly "New France."
In a letter to Le Monde, he anoounced that he was quitting the Communists, saying "my party has lost its eyes and its memory."

The importance of Mr. Kooopnicki's statement, harsh even for a defector, was that it took the party to task from a revolutionary point of view rather than one of criticiz-ing its failure to appeal to more moderate Frenchmen.

It is evident, behind the veil of traditional Communist discretion, that many party officials are torn between nostalgia for the simple, absolute pro-Soviet faith of the past and concern at the failure to spread its influence in France. Re-newal and fresh attitudes have been proclaimed repeatedly, only to slip off and reveal the attachment to old habits.

Since this is a period of economic contraction in France, with high unemployment and widespread dissatisfaction among workers, it is a time when the Communists might expect to be gaining sympathizers and increasing influence.

In the case of Mr. Markov, an examination turned up a tiny pellet in his leg with two small holes that could have contained a contraceable toxic substance.

• At the Bachelors' Ball in 1953, attended by 84 of London's most eligible bachelors, 23-year-old Lord Carnegie declared: "I prefer cars to women. You don't get caught on the sequins."

o In 1959 the New Year was welcomed with a party given by the vivacious Mrs. Bunty Kinsman in her home in Milner Street, Chelsea. The theme of the party was the Vie de Boheme. Mrs. Kinsman was attired as a Salvador Dali painting and her Lloyds underwriter husband was dressed as the Eiffel Tower by Moonlight, Duncan Sandys, minister of defense, wore a painter's

 In 1963 the Kinsmans were at it again. with a medieval New Year's Eve party. Bunly Kinsman was dressed as a unicorn while her husband wore a fur cover from a baby's pram explaining that he was "a middle-aged

● The most mind-boggling party of all took place in 1941. In the middle of June reports came from Palm Beach that vivacious Eisa Maxwell has staged a "Bitta" party to raise money for British war charities. Guests were asked to come in dressing-gowns, siren suits or their oldest clothes and a large tent was scattered with fake debris front which dummy figures were extricated and carried off on stretchers. These events are from a book called "Gossip 1920-1070," a deadpen chroni-cle of the less significant events of half a century compiled by Old Harrovi-an Andrew Barrow, 33, who is not a gossio columnist and has never appeared in a column although he was listed in the Court Circular of the Times, which is rather bet-. Se was a page at despite its high price and careful. Talky, A columnist scheduler two devoted two observed training new States: 10 devoted two observed training new states.

> generous excerpts. Although concerned with English events, the book will be published in 1979 in the United States and Mr. Barrow's agent has sold tea-towel rights in the United States to the book's interesting endnapers, a sort of genealogical chart showing how everyone is related to everyone else. "There is such a continuum in London," Mr. Barrow says.

> "It's tittle-tattle, relaxing. Someone said this book makes no strain on the mind. which I think was not meant as a compliment but I took it as one. I like everyone in the book. One reviewer said I sneer, I certainly don't. Sometimes I was almost crying because of the way people survived: their durability is so touching.
> "If you read it carefully, there are lots of > patterns in it, titere is a sort of rhythm, I'd like a reviewer to say it's an extremely weird book — the selection of details, the rhythm. the leaving of people in the air."

> Weird it is indeed, with such characters as Unity Mutford going to parties with her pet grass snake, Enid, slung around her neck, the Begum Aga Khan declaring during an interval of "Rigoletto" at Coveot Garden in 1938 that Hitler was the most attractive man she had ever met, and the strapping Col. Barker who turned out to be a woman. 'This is terrible," said the colonel's motherin-law, "My daughter nearly fainted when

Item from 1920: On March 23, the vicar, of All Saints, Cheltenham, was preaching by candlelight when the horrified faces of his congregation drew his attention to the fact that his surplice was on fire. A short while after the flames had been extinguished, it was discovered that the garment was again

There are fleeting headliners such as Christine Keeler, and there is the durable Lady Diana Cooper who is followed from her days as an actress in "The Miracle" through to an incident in 1968 when she receives apologies from the deputy commissioner of the Metropolitan Police after a midnight raid by policemen seeking can-nabis in a hatbox. There are so many entries for Cecil Beaton that the TLS reviewer suggested Mr. Barrow was obsessed by him.

"I interviewed Cecil Beaton by telephone once on what makes a good letter," Mr. Barrow said. " 'The smallest details, the minutia are always interesting," he said."

'Completely Trivial'

Mr. Barrow agrees. "I am completely trivial. I have never been able to draw conclusions." He has just written an article for Harpers and Queen on private dances and is writing one on nicknaraes. He has found two Bubbles and two people named Sunny so far. He wrote for The Observer for a while: A piece on nutterfly farms and an investigative piece on dandruff, "It took four or five days hard research, No one knows what causes it."

He says he is more interested in what a statesman had for lunch than in what he says. He is ruther pleased to have learned from the Evening Standard's Diary page what Neville Chamberlain ate on the aircraft that carried him to Berchtesgaden on Sept. 15, 1938 (whisky and sandwiches going there, chicken and claret coming

Trivia in such quantity can be so hypnotic as to seem to have meaning. "Someone said that £10 [the price of the hook] is too much to pay to learn that Lady Pamela Hicks won three bars of soap at a tombola," Mr. Barrow says, "I think it's marvelous, Three bars of soap: that's just the point."

Queen's Honors List PEOPLE: Has 685 Recipionts

Queen Elizabeth 218 created for new life peers, 21 knights and made soprano Joan Sutherland and single-handed sailor Naomi James dames of the British Empire Sincer Olivia Newton-John and telephanan-novelist James Herriot were on the laurels list 100. Each was awarded the Order of the British Empire medal for outstanding work in their respective fields. Twice a year the queen hands out utles and awards to loyal subjects nominated by the orime minister. This New Year's Honors List named 685 recipients. A life peer-age went to Sir Bernard Miles, founder of London's Mermaid the ater. He is only the second actor to be made a lord — the first is Lord (Laurence) Olivier. Another peer's title, beld for life and not passed on to descendants, went to Hugh Scanlon, former president of one of the country's most powerful trade unions. In general, however, it was a routine list, filled with people hardly known nationally let alone worldwide. One exception was Gracie Fields, the far-famed entertainer, who was given the title "Dame." the female equivalent of a knightbood. Artist Ruskin Spear, actors Donald Sinden and Gordon Jack-son (of "Upstairs, Downstairs"). James Cameron and 10 other journalists, theater designer John Bury. former pop singer Tommy Steele and policemen, firemen and civil servants received other awards. One new knight was orcbestral conductor Charles Mackerras. Allan Clark, former groundskeeper at Ayr race course, received his Britisb Empire Medal for services "to racing generally." William Stevens was bonored not only for 19 years of selling tickets on the London subway system, but for tackling a man armed with a sawed-off sbotgun who was trying to snatch a subway payroll.

The runnersup included a highjumper, a gymnast and a swimmer, but the Soviet Sportsman of the Year award went to someone who neither leaped nor dived. World chess champion Anatoly Karpov won the award in the annu-al poll of the Federation of Soviet Sports Journalists. Karpov, who defended his title in the Philippines against Soviet defector Viktor Korchnoi, also was personally honored by President Leonid Brezhnev with the Order of the Red Banner of Labor. Second in the sportwriters' list was highjumper Vladimir Yashchenko, who set indoor and outdoor world records this year, followed by gymnast Nikolai Andri-anov, i englumper VIIgelmina Bardausi ine, swimmer Vladimir Samilian and promise to Mukain.

three years, these paintings, pompously called "Works of the Orientalist School," have been soaring to dizzying heights. This is entirely due to the Middle Eastern market.

went up to a mad £48,400. It is strictly the subject matter that accounts for this record price. Were it a European landscape by the same artist, it would go for a tenth of that figure—if that.

In this category, variations in style or even pictorial quality seem to have very little effect on prices. Another Egyptian street scene, by Viennese painter Rudolf Ernst who studied at the Vienna Academy before settling in Paris, was in totally different style—less sketchy, more sentimental. It sold just as brilliantly, for £19,800, the difference in price simply reflecting the lesser

Perhaps the most interesting side of such sales to outsiders who do oot collect in this field is the visual recognizable style. You can also sense his feeling for others — more than just great his drumming is demonstration they provide of the decadence that hit European painting before Impressionism. In its early stage, it begins with mechanical, lifeless repetition of past. This is particularly evident in the Dutch school of the period. Jan Kobell's "Milkmaid with Cautle and Sheep" is a cheap offshoot flierally—sell-"It's called 'putting it in the right place,' " he says. "Drumming is complimentary. It isn't supposed to be dominating. It should embelis a cheap offshoot (literally — selling for £2,620 — and figuratively) of 17th century landscape painting. While in Japan, he conducted four drum clinics: "Attendance was 930 one day, We had to use a concert hall, One of the questions I'm

As painters got tired of copying the past, they tried the picturesque strain discussed above. When this began to wear out, they fell headlong into the trap of competing with photography. It is fascinating to watch the gradual change in composition and, more subtly, in the observation of details that characterizes conventional paintings throughout Europe as photography gained popularity by the 1870s. "A Huntsman With His Hounds in a Woodland Clearing," done in 1873 by Alexander von Wierusz Kowaldand Clearing and the convention of the convention o ski of the German school, is typi-cal. Painters began to single out street scenes and handle them like the close-ups of a photographer. In 1882 Alfredo Ricci painted a knife grinder, cropping part of the hig wheel on the right side of the picture in a way that none of his predecessors would have considered. The setting itself is photographic: The man is shown stand-ing against a blank wall, without perspective - a total break with tradition, although Ricci's carefully realistic manner is anything but revolutionary.

Ideological Rift

By then the hreak between the new avant garde school - Impres-sionism and Pointillism - and the bulk of the painters was complete. ized the conventional painters. The artistic community was torn by an ideological/esthetic rift.

The recent resurrection of the conventional painters and their phenomenal success at auction, emphasized by Wednesday's sale, strongly suggests that the apparent conversion of the public to the Impressionism and later movements is far from complete or lasting. The steep prices paid for academic painting show that it is not just a substitute for better paintings that MORONI. the Compros - Here in the Indian Ocean. on a eluster of African islands known best for poverty and per-fume, a bizarre drama has ended 33 months of national insanity and set this country on the path toward democracy.

The cast of characters, living and dead, include a president nick-named the Madman of Moroni, a white mercenary looking for a bome and a winning side after 23 years of losing, and two wealthy exiles, one of them a deposed Comoran president who lived in Paris while plotting their return to this archipelago midway between Madagascar and Mozambique. The four had known each other before, both as enemies and friends, in the early days of the Comoro's hapless independence from France. Now, several double crosses later, they were playing out what was perhaps Africa's first civilian coup d'état waged in the name of democracy and capitalism.

The so-called Madman of Moroni was Ali Soilih, 41, an atheist who had subjected his 300,000 citizens to a parody of the Chinese revolution. He replaced the civil service with illiterate teen-agers, lowered the voting age to 14, burned 134 years of French administrative records, banned Moslem traditions, declared himself a prophet and ordered all the dogs in the country killed when he had a vision of a man with a dog trying to assassi-

"He seemed normal enough and full of ideals at first." Soilih's former premier, Ahhas Jusuf, recalled recently. "But at the end he was clearly crazy. He wouldn't leave his house for months at a time, and he stayed up all night watching movies and drinking whiskey and smoking hashish and injecting something into his arm. During the day he took Valium pills and stumbled around with hig, bloodshot eyes.

"I tried to tell him, we cannot run a country like this, with teenagers in charge of the ministries, with so many people getting killed and jailed. But he said the whiskey and hashish gave him clear visions for the future. Then he put my mother in prison, She's 75."

Veteran Mercenary

The mercenary was Bob Denard. 50, who had fought in wars for more than two decades from Indochina to Africa. The Comoros, the Frenchman was to say later, was one of the last African countries that a handful of freelance soldiers could still take over. Other African armies were getting stronger and his was a profession without a

The exiles in Paris were Ahmed Abdullah, 59 — who was the president of the Comoros during its first 28 days of independence, before being overthrown hy Soilih with Denard's help - and Moroni businessman Mohammed Ahmed 62 who mortgaged his Paris apartment to help finance the $2 million coup that took place last May 13 after a year of planning.

"Our country has been very sick, run by a lunatic for nearly three years." Abdullah, who was restored to the presidency, said recently.
"Few men in Africa have done to their country what Ali Soilih did to his. We have a heavy joh ahead of us to recover. We know that, Despite Soilih, we are not fools."

Soilih's 33-month Draconian rule referred to here as the hlack period — was extraordinary. Boasting that he had "changed the people's mentality." Soilih nationalized everything from the taxis to the small fishing boats, gave hands of young thugs carte hlanche to terrorize and kill in the name of revolution, forhade Moslem women to wear black veils and once stormed into a mosque raging: "Go ahead. Call on God. See if he answers."

Normal Enough

Life had been normal enough in this pleasant, white-washed Arabic capital of 15,000 persons the night before the May coup. The people had been treated to the common spectacle of seeing prisoners marched through the narrow streets in sackcloth, their shaven heads and faces painted in white stripes while a man with a megaphone announced their alleged offenses. The island's largest hotel, the 25room itsa 20-year-old harman. Youssoul and many other places that he will Zoubeir, whiled away the hours not discuss. Rusting Trawler

Financed hy Abdullah and Ahmed, Denard set off from Europe in April, he says, in a rusting, 30-year-old trawler, the Masiwa, Except for one Briton and two Germans, his handpicked crew was French and Belgian. Each man had his specialty, ranging from commu-nications to munitions. They left under the guise of making mineral surveys in Argentina, hut when they reached the Cape of Good Hope, Denard recalled, they simply turned left instead of right, Shortly before 4 a.m. on May 13, Denard received the radio message from Moroni that Soilib, full of hrandy, had fallen asleep. The mercenaries slipped into three rubber rafts and paddled to a sandy beach. their faces blackened, carrying sawed-off shotguns and grenades. Worshippers at the mosque across the street watched in disbelief.

The mercenaries split into three groups. One moved on foot along the coastal road to the radio slation, another up the hill to Soilih's villa, a third north to the military short end of several husiness deals camp near the Itsandra Hotel. In three hours it was over. Thirty men had captured a country.

Ten Comoran soldiers were killed. The others, along with 80 Tanzanian military advisers, fled or were captured. One mercenary sprained his hack in the assault. By hreakfast. Denard was on the phone to Paris, telling Abdullah. 'Soilih's under house arrest, the well as money, had been on the los- army's surrendered, the people are soon as we clean up things a bit." Seychelles President Albert Rene, who had come to power a year earlier in a coup led by black Tanzanian mercenaries, said that the white mercenaries "must be sent packing." Tanzanish President Julius Nyerere, who supported the despoin Moroni regime because Soilih claimed to be a Socialist, helped have the new government thrown out of the annual Organization of African Unity summit in the Sudan. Madagascar cut com-munications to its neighbor.

"I don't know what the African eountries are so upst about." De-nard said. "At least they know where I am. If they drive me away I will disappear and who knows where I may show up next."

To the Comoran people, Denard had ended a nightmare. He was a hero and a liberator. They cheered him on the success and sold T-shirts emblazoned with his name. And Denard responded by bestowing Comoran citizenship and the rank of colonel on himself, taking the Moslem name Moustapha Mouhadjou and announcing that he was hanging up his gun and set-tling in the Comoros forever. His $600-a-month soldiers moved into the Itsandra Hotel, running up a $50,000 bill that remains unpaid. Denard met a pretty 21year-old receptionist at the hotel, Mazna, whom he married. By then, the mercenaries had gotten the phone working again, supervised the removal of garhage from the streets and made the C the removal garbage from the streets and made the Comorans whitewash their scruffy homes. They had become the de facto rulers of the Comoros.

"I know mercenary is a dirty word in Africa," said the new minister of information, Hadji Hassanali, who had no other way to save the people and the country from the Soilin regime.

"Is it any different that we used mercenaries when Ethiopia uses Cubans and Chad uses the French? Everyone picks his friends. And if you have a leak in the kitchen you call a plumber."

Soilih Killed

On May 22, nine days after the coup. Abdullah returned from Paris and was greeted by 30,000 ecstatic Comorans. A week later, Soilih was killed by mercenary guards, al-legedly as he tried to escape from his villa where he was under house arrest, awaiting trial for misap-propriating millions of dollars of aid money from China and Kuwait. His mother, 79-year-old Mahamouda Mze, is a peasant of simple dignity and great warmth. Her small, dark living room stays cool even when the heat outside is unbearable. There is an old Marconi radio in the corner, useless because there is no electricity in the village. For decorative touches, she has placed a rear-view auto mirror and a vase of plastic roses on the table near the radio. She lights the kerosene lamp, the hlazing sun out-side invisible in the blackened chamber she seldom leaves. "You know," she said, "my son was a good boy. He would come every month to bring me food and a few francs; and he was always talking about how he wanted to do something for his people. He said Communism was best for a poor country like this. He said African experiments with it had failed in places like Tanzania and everywhere but he was going to make it work here and all the world would

Since returning to power, he has put adults back in charge of the ministries and sent the boys who used to run the country back to school. He has disbanded Soilih's army and formed a new one half the size. He has released the 300 political prisoners although 50 new ones have taken their place.

Political parties have been legalized, individual and religious freedoms have been restored, a presidential election has been scheduled for Sunday. The Chinese Embassy has been put on notice that the revolution is over, the economy is to be denationalized, foreign investment is to be encouraged, and a new constitution modeled on Western lines has been approved by the

Because the country has no newspaper and most people are illi-terate, the constitution was read over the radio, a few pages a night, so the Comorans would know what they were voting on.

"After every storm there is a calm." Abdullah said. "For us, this is like starting our independence all over again. With help we can suc-ceed. You look at countries like Kenya, Senegal, the Ivory Coast, They are just doing their work, huilding stability and prosperity, without getting bogged down in ideology. Those are the examples for us to follow."

One of Abdullah's first moves af-protect the Comoros against outside attack and to renew its subsidy on one condition — the mercenaries had to leave. Recently the vanguard of 40 French military advisers arrived to replace the mercenaries in training a new army. A French charge d'affaires moved into Soilih's hilltop house to prepare it for an ambassador. French doctors, teachers and technicians are on their way to Moroni. The remaining 15 mercenaries will be gone within a week, the govern-

And so last month, on Sept. 27. after being honored at a state ban-quet, Denard bought up all the Tshirts in town bearing his name, drank his last bottle of local orange soda pop, said goodbye to his Comoran wife, collected the Zairian wife he had met during another war and, dressed in civilian clothes and carrying a duffle bag, drove to the seaside airport.

-Interpol Begins to Grow Into Its Image—

Joseph Fitchett

PARIS, (IHT) — Interpol at last is catching up to its popular image as a sophisticated international crime-fighting organization.

For most of its 55 years, the International Criminal Police Organization — "Interpol," its more familiar name, is really its cable address amounted to little more than a theory of international police cooperation. Armed only with a set of largely antiquated files, it was little used and had little impact.

Although it is still far less than a world police force or a crack international detective squad, it has emerged as a permanent pivot of governments' expanding cooperation in international law enforcement, according to Interpol officials and other police sources.

Now with its own radio communications network, starting to computerize its files and at last deploying its first "Interpol agents," the Parisbased organization structures cooperation between police forces, tracks down fugitives across borders, issues wanted notices that work as international arrest warrants, pieces together intel-ligence on drug traffic and combats terrorism.

Files Upgraded

Interpol case files, once a repository of oftenunverified information about convicts, now aim at big-time "internationals" and cases, ranging from the one-ton haul of Lebanese hashish found in a villa rented by German automobile beiress Maria-Christina von Opel near St. Tro-pez. France, to the terrorist "Carlos" who led the Vienna raid on OPEC oil ministers.

Recognizing Interpol's value, key governments recently bave upgraded their participation. In Westero Europe today, the organization has produced enough results for governments to raise their contributions to the organization's $6 million annual budget. Overcoming decades of American suspicions. Interpol has become a global ally of the U.S. Drug Enforcement Agency. Among East Bloc countries, Yugoslavia and Rumania work actively with Interpol — forerunners "testing the water," some insiders believe, for Poland and perhaps even the Soviet Union and Cuba.

The outlook for interpol today is radically different from what it was just five years ago, when the organization was hamstrung by politiwhen the organization was hamstrung by politi-al conflicts, short of money and so inefficient that simple police inquiries between European nember forces could take weeks to answer. Interpol now has offices in 126 countries. These National Central Bureaus (NCBs) are saffed by local police officers, who are designated by the member agencies in each country: the riminal police in France, the Bundeskriminalamt in West Germany, the Justice Department in the United States. The NCBs funnel the nternational police circulars and messages to and from the police organizations in their own countries. The machinery for international police cooperation has been huilt up gradually as Interpol's working practices won acceptance among police forces, where suspicion — even of other policemen — is an occupational trait. Although Interpol has no direct authority, its requests for action, tranmitted on standard forms from one police force to another, have gained rising respect and impact.

Arrest Warrants

An interpol arrest warrant, issued at the request of a member country, is a basis for provisional arrest, eliminating slow diplomatic exchanges.

Business is booming. The NCBs in France (on the Quai des Orfevres in Paris) and in West Germany (in Wiesbaden) had similar case loads last year — about 100.000 messages, 350 local ar-resis on behalf of foreign police, nearly 200 citizens arrested abroad for extradition. "Member countries are getting their money's worth for their Interpol dues." a French official comment-

The Interpol iceberg has its tip in a General Secretariat located in an office building on a quiet side street in St. Cloud, a bedroom suburb of Paris. Unremarkable except for its slit windows and chain-link fence, the frierpol Secretar-iat — invisibly protected by radar scanners in-stalled several years ago after an apparently motiveless bomb attack by two young Spaniards — houses the 300,000 central files, the international radio-teletype station and 200 international staff members serving the NCBs. The sec-retariat coordinated police cooperation on 35.000 cases last year while also analyzing crime trends, organizing police seminars and administering the organization.

Running the secretariat is Jean Nepote, a high-ranking French policeman who was as-signed to Interpol in 1946 and then was elected to the top day-to-day job in 1963. After cau-tinusly shepherding Interpol to its current credi-bility with governments. Mr. Nepote, 64, will

His successor is expected to be Andre Bossard, 52, a French police officer with a Pb.D. in law, who moved to Interpol from the Paris po-lice seven years ago. Like Mr. Nepote, his background is in staff work, not sleuthing.

Recent incumbents have all been French. France helped re-establish and expand Interpol after World War II by lending funds and personnel — a policy giving France, at compara-uvely little cost, a prestigious role in the international organization.

It is a key job. Interpol, recognized by the United Nations as a de facto intergovernmental body, remains a private organization, accountable, through the Secretary-General, to its own executive committee. The committee's 13 members, who include top law-enforcement men from Britain. West Germany, the United States, Canada and Sweden, are elected by the Interpol General Assembly. This year's session, attended more than 100 national delegations, is being held now in Panama.

Mr. Nepote, a trim, slightly stooped man who wears his white hair in a crew cut. is credited with making Interpol flexible in its cooperation with police services, less narrowly bureaucratic and much more efficient.

During a recent interview in his 7th-floor office overlooking Paris and the Seine. Mr. Nepote was reluctant to divluge details of Interpol's anti-terrorism work, its newest major activity.

The subject is sensitive because futerpol's char-ter prohibits it from handling cases with a politi-cal character. However, other reliable sources were more forthcoming.

Terrorism ranks second to drug smuggling in Interpol's constellation, the sources said. "We couldn't refuse to handle terrorism, then still expect governments to go on paying their contri-butions," an official commented.

Interpol uses its worldwide radio network to flash warnings of planned terrorist strikes. Inter-pol radio is patched directly into the Interna-tional Air Transport Association's separate net-work for flight security officers. Such an alert from Interpol-Beirut enabled Interpol-Nicosia to call down a Rome-bound airliner in time to remove a bomh set to explode in mid-flight, sav-ing the lives of 102 passengers.

Interpol has huilt up files on hundreds of terrorists unplicated in operations claimed by organizations ranging from the Baader-Meinhof gang and the Popular From for the Liberation of Palestine to Croatian nationalist extremists and separatists of many countries. National anti-terrorist squads have scored in a-"number of cases" as a direct result of Interpol cooperation, sources said.

Interpol officials pointed out that the reports that the organization gets are mainly after-the-fact, not sensitive information about terrorist plans or fast-hreaking crises. "Interpol guys are the first to admit that sensitive information is handled hilateraly between intelligence services. not Interpol," a knowledgable specialist said.

Accepting their limitations, Interpol officials said the organization can never venture into the sensitive area of "suspects," particularly with the appearance of privacy legislation in the United States and other countries. To respect their "nonpolitical" charter, Interpol officials have worked out a doctrine of officially ignoring underground groups — which may claim a political motive and thus immunity from Interpol while standing ready to tackle the same people, as individuals, once they are implicated in criminal aets like hostage-taking.

'Pragmatic'

Similarly, Interpol asks governments for "non-political" information about hijackings, usually the modus operandi, whether the act was perpetrated by dissidents escaping to the West or Japanese extremists seeking political concessions.

"We are pragmatic, not legalistic," Mr. Nepote said. "We have mapped out a commonsense terrain for our activines which governments do not complain abont."

Despite its lack of spectacular coups, Interpol plays an important nuts-and-bolts role in the plays an important nuts-and-bolts role in the fight against terrorism, notably in prevention, and it bolds anti-terrorism conferences every year or so. Although both Israel and radical Arab states send their professional policemen to participate, Interpol officials deny that any sensitive information has leaked. "Governments disclose here only what they want to — it's our system's strength and limitation," an organizer said.

But although a great deal of Interpol effort is involved with terrorism, the organization's main activity is its Narcotics Division. One-third of gether the threads of international investigaThis approach, an activism unprecedented for Interpol, is linked with the organization's new attempt to develop international criminal intelligence. Undercover information obtained by lo-cal police forces, pieced together with Interpol help, can enable a combined police swoop to intercept the traffickers. Interpol has a catalyst role. "You have to understand a cop's mentality." explained Chief Superintendent Raymond Kendall, a Scotland Yard veteran who heads Interpol's crime divisions. "He won't confide his suspicions about upcoming jobs except to another professional he respects. Our regional agents are getting their confidences and putting together a European counter-attack on drug traffickers," he said.

The drug drive is linked with a dramatic change at Interpol — the start of active U.S. involvement in recent years. The United States treated Interpol with suspicion while J. Edgar Hoover was running the FBI. But Interpol has risen in U.S. esteem, notably because of its good working relationship with the Justice Department, particularly the Drug Enforcement Administration (DEA). Liaison is now so close that Interpol now has its first American staffers two DEA men in the Narcotics Division and a customs agent.

"The Interpol system of international warrants is widely respected," air Interpol official said. "A DEA narc, who runs down a suspect ahroad, will ask us to get him arrested for extradition rather than try working through the emhassy." DEA officials confirmed this point, underscoring the end of the old quarrel for jurisdiction. Interpol is even preparing to take over DEA training programs for foreign drug squads.

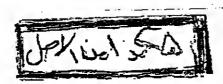

Reflecting on the 30 years during which he gained acceptance for Interpol. Mr. Nepote took particular pride in diversifying the police staff to an international one. From a postwar nucleus of himself and two other French police officers in a borrowed room, by 1963, when Mr. Nepote took over the top joh. Interpol counted 50 Frenchmen out of a staff of 65. Today the General Secretariat has a staff of 200 people drawn from 20 countries. Although Interpol has been challenged by de-Atthough Interpol has been challenged by defenders of privacy laws, notably in France and in the United States, Mr. Nepote defended the organization against charges that it was liable to disseminate unverified information about private citizens, Mr. Nepote said it was up to each country's NCB, which operates inside a local police force, to comply with local laws.

Visibly gratified by Interpol's progress during the budget is earmarked to fight drug traffic.

Concorde Makers Seek Solution for 5 Unsold Planes

By Don Cook

PARIS, Oct. 20 — Some time toward the end of this year, the last supersonie Concorde airliner will come off the production line at the French Aerospatiale works at Toulouse with a price-tag of around $60 million on its needle-nose and oot a buyer in sight. At that point there will be five Coocordes flying with British Airways, four with Air France—and five on the ground unsold. The British and French governments are going to have to face up fairly soon to the problem of what to do about their $2.2-billion investment in airliners, marvels of technology but which oo airline can afford to buy and operate.

Since the Concordes went into commercial service in January 1976, they have operated on a par with any other airliners as far as reliability and punctuality, with a minimum of cancellations and good on-time performance.

By the end of September, Air France had flown just over 122,000 passengers on Concordes to New York, Washington, Dakar in Senegal, Rio de Janeiro and Caracas, and has just launched a twice-weekly extension of its Paris Washington service on to Mexico City. British Airways is so far operating only to New York, Washington and Bahrain in the Gulf.

Air France reports summer passenger loads at 93 percent of capacity from Paris to New York daily and 80 percent capacity on the Rio de Janeiro run twice weekly, 40 percent to Caracas once a week and 52 percent to Washington three times weekly

But while all of this seems like a lot of flying for nine in-service Concordes, in fact, the "utilization factor" for the supersonics is extremely low compared to subsonic aircraft. Air France will have logged only about 1,500 flying bours on each of its four Concordes during 1978, whereas it gets around 4,000 flying hours out of its Boeing 747 jumbo jets with nearly five times the payload. British Airways' utilization so far is much lower than that of Air Extract Less than $600 hours for each that of Air Extract Less than $600 hours for each that of Air Extract Less than $600 hours for each that of Air Extract Less than $600 hours for each that of the Extract Less than $600 hours for each that of the Extract Less than $600 hours for each $600 hours for e that of Air France — less than 800 hours for each of its five aircraft.

From the operating experience of the two airlines so far, it appears that the super fare for Concorde travel — about 20 percent higher than regular first-class fares — is enough to break even on operating costs of fuel, crews and operational maintenance. But it is not enough to make any ignificant dent in amortizing the purchase price of British Airways, for example, is setting aside about $30 million a year for a 10-year write-off of more than $300 million which it paid for its fleet of five Concordes. Thus, of a $34-million loss on Coocorde during 1977 on the British books, $30 million was description of the purples. million was depreciation of the purchase. Air France is presumably having to write off its investment in a similar bookkeeping charge against its profitable operations.

'Lease-Back Solution'

British Airways chairman, Sir Frank MeFadzean, is therefore pushing for a "lease-back solution" in which the British and French governments, probably through their nationalized aerospace industries, would simply make the five remaining Concordes available to airlines on a lease back with no numbers involved. The nine lease basis with oo purchase involved. The nine oow flying would also be taken over by the pro-posed leasing corporation and leased back to Brit-isb Airways and Air France. It is possible, too, that oo such a leasing basis, Pan American or Trans World Airlines would be tempted to operate Concordes across the busy North Atlantic route. On a lease basis, Iranian Na-tional Airways also might be interested again in seeing Concorde operate from Tehran to Paris and then New York.

Meanwhile, both British Airways and Air France are going into a cooperative deal with Braniff Airways to extend their trans-Atlantic flights to Washington on to Dallas-Ft. Worth. Braniss crews are at present training on Concorde simulators and eventually will take over piloting subsonic from Washington to Texas and back. thereby giving Texas passengers direct Concorde service to London and Paris,

But even with generous leasing terms, the other airlines are going to take a long hard look at the cost and the prospects for super-paying passengers before following Air France and British Airways into the financial swamps.

Mexican Leader to Seek Markets in Asia

By Alan Riding

MEXICO CTTY, Oct. 20 (NYT) - President Jose Lopez Portillo sets off this weekend in search of new export markets in China and Japan, even though, apart from oil and traditional agricultural prod-ucts, few Mexican goods are able to compete abroad.

Its fast-rising oil exports not-withstanding Mexico is in fact perhaps the only middle-sized industri-al power in the world that is not using foreign trade as the main engine of domestic economic growth.

As with many large developing nations, Mexico's initial postwar industrial boom was founded mainly on import substitution carried out by foreign investors that enjoyed protection from outside compe-tition in a captive market. But while such nations as Brazil, South Korea and Taiwan were beginning to flood the lucrative U.S. market with cheap leather, textile and electronic goods in the early seventies, Mexico found itself suffering everlarger balance of payments deficits. And when the Mexican peso was finally devalued two years ago — for the first time since 1954 — Mexican industry was still unable to take advantage of the measure.

As a result, in spite of growing oil exports and a sharp drop in imports last year, Mexico is once again facing balance-of-payments pressures. Excluding oil, exports have risen by only 2.8 percent over the past year, while manufactured volved were chosen for the first for-U.S. Copper Industry mal proceedings because they Denied Import Relief

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20 (Reuters) — President Carter has decided not to grant import relief to the U.S. copper industry, a spokesman for the office of the spe-

The spokesman said Mr. Carter cited his overriding concern about the inflationary impact of such re-lief in a basic industry where rami-fications would be widespread. He also noted encouraging signs of im-provement in the domestic copper market, as reflected in the "sub-stantial increase" in prices since the beginning of the this year.

I THINK WE CAN COME TO A DECISION RIGHT NOW. WE'LL SEND YOU 500 IN ASSORTED COLORS. YES? WHICH COLOR DON'T YOU WANT? HMM ... YOU REALIZE THAT MEANS WE'LL HAVE TO REPACKAGE ADDS TO OUR COST. YES. WELL, LOOK DOWN THE COLUMN THAT SAYS BROKEN PACKAGES'. UH-HUH,...TOO HIGH? TELL YOU WHAT, SINCE IT'S A QUANTITY ORDER, I'M WILLING TO SPLIT THE DIFFERENCE OVER THE PRICE ORIGINALLY QUOTED, YES ?... OKAY YOU'LL GET ALL THE COLORS. EXCEPT THE BLUE, WELL, WHEN I TALKED TO YOUR MR. PETRIE HE SAID IT WAS ALL RIGHT, OH YES, I TALKED TO HIM. SAID YOU HAVE ENOUGH IN STOCK. ENOUGH TO HOLD YOU FOR AWHILE, SAID TO TELL YOU IF YOU HAD ANY DOUBTS, UH-HUH. OH, OF COURSE, YOU'RE IN A BIND? WE'LL GET THAT ORDER ON A PLANE

Do you need details...a decision right now...give-and-take? Then it's the telephone to the U.S.A.

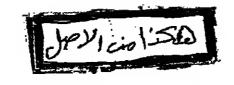

You won't wait hours-or even overnight-for an answer as you must with other means of communications. Right on the spot you can explore, persuade, explain-and close the sale.

The cost isn't much when you consider the results.

BOOKS.

BOTH her detractors and advo-cates have trouble reconciling and institutions.

In these pages we meet Vannozza was the real Lucrezia, the young woman the Venetian diarist Priuli called a courtesan who had bestowed her favors on her father and children, she played a minor role in two of her brothers, or the respect. ed duchess of Ferrara she became in later life, praised by Aristo for her virtue, her patronage of the arts and her good government? Rachel Erlanger, her latest biographer and in many ways the most discerning, has done a convincing joh of refurbishing Lucrezia's repu-tation and, more importantly, por-traying her as a credible and multidimensional person in a dazzling and dramatic age.

The former task is not a new one. As historians reassessed the sources of accusations against Lucrezia the poisonings, the incest, hist, and scandalous behavior — some justice began to be done. This biography goes beyond the verdict of history to animate Lucrezia by telling us the details of her life. It is not an easy task. First, there is the legend itself to overcome, embedded not only in Guicciardini's "History of Italy," which did more to blacken the Borgias than any other single work (though it must be admitted that some of the Borgias helped), but also in novels and opera, in the very metaphor of poisoning and

Then, too, there are the men who dominated the scene --- her father, Rodrigo Borgia, who became Pope Alexander VI, and Cesare Borgia, her eldest brother, who also became a cardinal and duke of Romagna. With relatives like that, Lucrezia didn't need any enemies. She had them, pevertheless, just by being a pawn in the politics of the Italian Renaissance. That was the major part of her trouble.

Erlanger understands the period, indeed captures it with striking realism. She keeps down the easy moral judgments which have marred histories of the period written, say, by the Victorians. Indeed, even present-day readers may be shocked to learn that Lucrezia was born to a cardinal of the church and his longtime concubine.

The practice, however, was so widespread at the time that few were outraged.

The author reminds us that in 1490 a high Roman prelate reported scarcely ever finding a priest or a member of the Curia without a concubine. King Ferrante of Naples complained the Holy City was filled with the sons and daugh-ters of cardinals. Rodrigo Borgia did his share; he fathered six besides Lucrezia. The Varican was --- and had been for a considerable time - riddled with corruption and licentious practices. There were such chroniclers as Johann Burchard, papal master of ceremonies during the trite duchess. There was one Lucreperiod, who recorded in his chronicle of daily activity such shocks as the presence of women at a papal banquet. Stefan Infessura, another diarist who saw with dismay the situation — "nothing good was done in Rome in those days" — recorded acts of sacrilege, robberies, and

LUCREZLA BORGLA

A Biography

By Rachel Erlanger, Hawthorne, Illustrated, 372 pp. $13.95. Reviewed by Robert Kirsch

> In these pages we meet Vannozza A dei Cattanei, mother of Lucrezia R and Cesare, a woman of some force and feelings. Though proud of her D an uomo carnalesco, the phrase used by his intimates, meaning a man of II) warm and affectionate nature devotedly attached to his own flesh and blood. Even before he was pope he found titles and benefices for his children, particularly in his R native Spain.

> There is no whitewash in these pages but at least there is an attempt at balance. In the wars and alliances, the chiffing the wars and alliances, the shifting sands of diplomacy and government in a frag-mented Italy, and the feuds and ovendettas, Alexander played the R usual chess game. Many feared he would be more nepotistic than his : G uncle had been as pope. Ferrara A sent an envoy to inquire. Alexander assured the man he intended to keep his childen at a distance. "At the time he said it, he probably meant it," the author writes, but he soon weakened. After dispensing rewards for his election, he made Cesare a bishop at 18 and a nephew a cardinal.

> Lucrezia was an important piece P in the chess board. Many of the events which would set the ground . K for her sinister reputation came from decisions Alexander made using her marriageability as part of R ins diplomacy. That too was part of the times: Borgia had no qualms about using his sons and daughters 'Y to cement diplomacy or to increase the family wealth.

Her feelings for her father and his for her, despite the scandalous reports of hostile observers, were affectionate. Indeed, Erlanger writes, "It was perhaps Lucrezia's gratitude for this reassuring love and her desire to prove worthy of it , that were at the root of her almost fatal compulsion to please that characterized her all her life."

Lucrezia emerges here as very much a woman of her time, somewhat superficially educated in the bumanities, trained to cook and do needlework, to look after household accounts, to look differ house-hold accounts, even in her exalted state. She indulged what Burck-hardt called "the national pastime for external display," bleached her hair, loved good clothes and smiled a lot. One lady who saw her in 1502 described her as sweet-faced rather than beautiful. The envoy from Ferrara wrote: "She had a smile that lit up her features in a thousand different ways. Never did a gentle creature seem happier to be alive." He thought he detected as : well a shade of sadness and an inexplicable taste for solitude. The answer in these pages is that there were not two Lucrezia Borgias, no homble monster and conzia in reality, another in legend. The latter lived longer, the former is being rediscovered.

Drysdale Fiery in 2d Career

By Rich Roberts

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 20 - Noting that Don Drys dale passed his 42nd birthday this year, one wonders if the old warhorse lives on or if the flames that once caused batters to live in fear have flickered and died. Well, it takes only a gentle probe — an innocent question about the record 154 batters he hit in his 12-year career - to stir the smoldering coals. "Sure I hit guys on purpose," he says, "when I knew they hit our guys on purpose f had a rule — a 2-Ior-1 rule. Two of theirs went down for every one of ours." The anger begins to rise.

"I don't see too many doing it today," Drysdale says. "I've said it on the air: [California] Angels players were hit and knocked down all year long, and the pitchers didn't come back at 'em. The ones that did . . well, that's one reason f don't like the designated hitter rule. The pitcher doesn't ever have to come up. If they had to come to the plate, they wouldn't be as wild inside as they are. Trouble is, when the Angel pitchers are wild, they seem to be wild outside."

There are exceptions. Nolan Ryan has buzzed a few whiskers. But generally Drysdale, one of the Angels' broadcasters during the last six years, finds it appalling that the batters — notably Lyman Bostock at Kansas City a few days before his death — have had take matters into their care hands by charging the to take matters into their own hands by charging the

The foregoing set the stage for a question Drysdale sasked often: Why doesn't he seek to become a man-

Answer: "The game's changed. I wouldn't last. I'd end up choking somebody. . . or killing somebody. I swear to God, I'd end up in prison. I couldn't even be a pitching coach. I'd be fighting my own players. My tolerance would not take what you see out there today.

"I enjoy the booth too much right now. I enjoy the people I'm around. A manager is hired to be fired. There's a heckuva lot more longevity in the booth. I may go to my grave thinking, I should have taken one shot, but the more I see of it, the more I say no."

Element of Fear

Drysdale's broadcasting sidekick, Dick Enberg, thinks Drysdale would he an excellent manage

"He knows baseball inside and out and he's a very strong leader." Enberg says. "He was as a player and he is as a person. People will follow him. A quality a manager needs today is that players must have a physical fear of him. I think [Jim] Fregori [field manager of the Angelel has that Don certainly has that." the Angels] has that. Don certainly has that."
But Enberg doesn't think it will happen,

Enberg means both financially and professionally. Nine years after Drysdale told Walt Alston his right arm was gone and walked away from a pennant race, he has completed the transition to expert broadcaster He knows he did the right thing every time he recalls the pain. Drysdale pitched a club-record 3,432 innings for the Los Angeles Dodgers in 12 seasons. Only two or three major leaguers this season matched the oumber of innings Drysdale averaged: 286.

He oever pitched a no-hitter but his record of 58%

consecutive scoreless innings — six straight shutouts
—in 1968 probably will land him in the Hall of Fame.

"It would be nice," Drysdale says.

Drysdale also holds Dodger records for most victories (209) — and most losses (166).

R APPERSWIL. Switzerland. OCT. 20 (1HT) —The Knie fan.ily probably comes as close to being Swiss aristocracy as any family in Switzerland. where enterprise counts as much as lineage does elsewhere.

The Knies are celebrating their 175th year in the circus.

They are capitalizing on their immense popularity and the special status reserved for them by the Swiss by calling this year a juhilee celebration of the founding of a dynasty.
The Cirque Knie has been on the road for the past six mooths, and colorful hillboards, featuring one clown balancing on another's knee, have been an-nouncing its imminent arrival in town after town.

Louis Knie, a member of the sixth generation in the circus, smiles about his family's exploiting their popularity, but says the marking of the dynasty's found-ing is just good show business. "Every year we have to think of something new, and an anniversary celebration seemed like a good idea, Also, 175 years in the fo previous years, the Knies have trained rhinos, hippos. camels and even crocodiles for the ring, and usually try to work up an act that involves animals that are natural enemies.

The animal acts are so effective and so well known that the Knies have made a profitable sideline by renting them out to

Last year, the Knies took first prize among the 50 circuses at the Circus Festival of Monte Carlo with their demonstration of dressage of Bengal tigers atop elephants and elephant acrobatic

The Knies' interest in animals came rather late, as the family's history goes. The first Knie to join a circus was Friedrick, who was born in 1784. He was the son of Empress Marie-Therese's doctor and was headed for a medical career until be fell in love with a borseback rider in an Innsbruck circus.

Tightrope Walker

At the age of 19 he got mar-ried and joined the circus as a tightrope walker. He became fa-mous all over Europe for his balancing act, usually performed in town squares on a cord strung hetween two huildings. Tightrope walking remained the family's specialty until 1909, wheo they moved here, down the lake from Zurich, and decided to put a more varied show together under a big tent. In 1928, Fredy Knie, 8, discovered horses. He was responsible for making dressage an important part of the Circus. His sons, Fredy Jr. and Rolf (who is the circus's present business manager), have followed in their father's footsteps. Rolf developed the elephants shortly after his brother took up with horses. and has passed his speciality on to his sons. Louis and Franco.

Louis Jr., 4, is also crazy about elephants, says his father, and the boy performs io an elephant's mouth on Sundays, when the circus gives a free per-formance using the troupe's chil-

Louis Knie says that the smartest thing the family has ever done, besides adding the animals, was the 1919 purchase from the Swiss Confederation of the right to call themselves the National Swiss Circus, It bas kept other European circuses out of Switzerland and reduced their four Swiss competitors to little more than sideshows.

Tough Life

But even though the Knies have made their circus into a profitable enterprise (they have installed a zoo and dolphin show bere to lure crowds on sunny days, when people are less in-clined to sit inside under a tent), Louis Knie says that circus life is still tough.

The family gets the act together during December, January and February, practicing from dawn to dusk, and then goes on tour the rest of the year. They hit 59 towns with their 250 people, 300 animals, 100 trailers and 60 wagons and a big top that seats 4,000. The logistics of hauling all that ioto and out of small Swiss villages for 380 performances a year is staggeriog.

Of the four sixth-generation brothers (all in their 20s) who are now taking over most of the circus' management, only Louis is married to a circus performer. She is Germaine Theron, from Sarasota, Fla., and Louis discovered her while she was in her family's bicycle act at Tivoli, in Copenhagen.

Mary-Jose married to Rolf

Jr., and Erica, Fredy Jr.'s wife, have been trained by their busbands in the circus arts, and are oow stars in their own rights. When Erica gave birth to a son last year, the news hit the froot pages of Swiss papers. The Swiss, like everyone, like to read birth announcements, especially if the bahy has a famous name and will probably assure that a favorite show will endure.
